

Bayardo and Angela: Can you put these events from Chapter Two of Chronicle of a Death Foretold in correct order on the timeline?

Now can you try to put times or dates next to the events?

Bayardo gives Angela a music box from the charity bazaar.
Bayardo finally gets the house of the Widower Xius, who then dies.
According to some, Bayardo first sees Angela across the square and says, "I'm going to marry her."
Angela's friends assure her that she can easily fake being a virgin on her wedding night.
Bayardo San Román is two hours late picking up his bride for the wedding.
The Vicario house is painted, the pigs are taken away, and preparations are made for the wedding.
Bayardo San Román, a stranger, arrives in town on the weekly boat.
Bayardo knocks on the Vicario door, and returns his bride to her mother, since she was not a virgin.
Bayardo's family, including General Petronio San Roman, arrives in a Model T car.
Santiago Nasar tries to estimate/predict how much the wedding cost.
Angela names Santiago Nasar as the man she's slept with / lost her virginity to.
The narrator's mother writes to him that "a very strange man has come" to the town.
Bayardo first asks the Widower Xius if he can buy his house. The Widow Xius says no.
Poncio Vicario loses his sight through doing fine work in gold "to maintain the honor of the house."
In a bit of unknowing foreshadowing, Santiago Nasar says that he doesn't want any flowers at his funeral.
